In historic vote, Senate approves repeal of 'don't ask'

By David Lightman
SCT NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON—The Senate voted 65-31 yesterday to end the Pentagon's "don't ask, don't tell" policy on gays and lesbians in the military, as President Obama declared "it is time to close this chapter in our history."

The vote, which sends the bill to Obama for his signature, not only was a historic triumph for gay rights, but it also sets the stage for gays to serve openly in the military for the first time.

It was lauded as "one of those moments in our history where we stepped up and squared our policies with the values this nation was founded on," said Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid (D-Nev.).

Obama left no doubt he will push to implement the new policy.

"By ending 'don't ask, don't tell,' no longer will our nation be denied the service of thousands of patriotic Americans forced to leave the military, despite years of exemplary performance, because they happen to be gay," he said.

"And no longer will many thousands more be asked to live a lie in order to serve the country they love."

Obama's signature will not mean instant repeal, but Defense Secretary Robert Gates pledged yesterday to move quickly.

"Once this legislation is signed into law by the president, the Department of Defense will immediately proceed with the planning necessary to carry out this change carefully and methodically, but purposefully," he said after the vote.

Under the legislation, Gates explained, repeal will take effect once the president, the secretary of Defense and the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff certify that implementation of the new policies and regulations written by the department "is consistent with the standards of military readiness, military effectiveness, unit cohesion, and recruiting and retention of the Armed Forces."

The Pentagon has said it could take up to a year to

CENSUS DATA DUE OUT TUESDAY IS EXPECTED TO COST NEW JERSEY ITS THIRD HOUSE SEAT SINCE 1970

IN DANGER OF LOSING MORE CLOUT

In a September report, Election Data Services — a firm that specializes in redistricting — projected New Jersey will lose one House seat, along with Illinois, Iowa, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri and Pennsylvania. New York and Ohio would each lose two. Texas would gain four, Florida would gain two, while Arizona, Georgia, Nevada, South Carolina, Utah and Washington would each gain one.

Redistricting almost certain to spark an unusually bitter struggle

STATESHOUSE PUBLIST

For years, New Jersey residents have been packing up and moving to warmer southern states. One of the state's congressional seats may soon follow.

The U.S. Census Bureau will release state population figures Tuesday that experts predict could cost New Jersey one of its 13 seats in the House of Representatives, which could trigger one of the most contentious congressional redistricting battles in state history.

"If you judge by the overall level of political polarization and interparty hostility, you would certainly predict that," said Rutgers University political science professor Ross K. Baker, who studies Congress.

While New Jersey's population is expected to grow in the 2010 Census figures, population booms in southern and western states are expected to outpace that of the Garden State.

The House of Representatives' membership is set at 435, so even though New Jersey is expected to grow in population, it could still lose a seat to a state that is growing faster.

Having one less seat means one less vote in the House, one less electoral vote in presidential elections, and one less person on committees that help shape legislation. If a member with a lot of political clout loses his seat, it could mean less influence for New Jersey, and the possibility that the state would receive less federal funding.

If New Jersey loses a seat, it would mark the fourth time in state history the congressional delegation has contracted.

New Jersey previously shed congressional representation in 1992, 1982 and 1842. Unlike those redistricting years, however, there is no clear answer as to which of New Jersey's current representatives would be forced to face each other for re-election in 2012 in the 12-district scenario.

The Democrats will absolutely come up with a plan that puts two Republicans back together, a plan that puts two Democrats back together.

Pick for schools czar praises teachers, condemns inequalities

By Jessica Calefati
STAR-LEDGER STAFF

They would seem an unlikely pair: Gov. Chris Christie, who has bashed teachers for the past year, and his new education commissioner, Christopher Cerf, who has spent his career supporting them.

But Cerf said his and Christie's goals are the same and he shares the governor's concerns about inequity in public education today.

"New Jersey has one of the best education systems in the country, which can only mean it's being led by a dedicated group of educators," Cerf said yesterday at his Montclair home. "At the same time, there are certain communities in this state where we should all be ashamed about the gap between children who are rich and poor and black and white."

In an exclusive interview with The Star-Ledger, Cerf said he considers teaching a craft for which he has the "highest imaginable respect." It's an opinion he formed in the late 1970s while leading class discussions about the American Revolution and grading papers on women's suffrage as a high school history teacher in Ohio.

"Teachers are some of the most unbelievably hard-working people in the country," Cerf said. "Everyone went to school, so everyone thinks they are an expert, but they don't understand how hard it is to be a good teacher."

Christie will nominate Cerf as the state's next education commissioner at a news conference in Trenton tomorrow, said a person briefed on the
